1.Provide a statement that explains why your agency needs the bill.

The Council was created in 2006 and our authorizing statute has not been substantively updated since. Under current law, RCW 43.20.270 through RCW 43.20.280, the Governor's Interagency Council on Health Disparities (Council) works to develop policy recommendations and promote coordination among relevant state agencies, communities, and the public and private sectors to address health disparities among people of color and women, among other duties.

Needed Updates

Updating and clarifying our name, membership, structure, authority, and responsibilities would allow the Council to more effectively support state government in addressing health inequities and promoting holistic health and wellbeing, thereby benefiting all Washingtonians.

These statutory updates are needed to:

- Build alignment with community visions and priorities, current state government efforts, and multisectoral approaches to advancing health equity at the federal level.
- Provide coordinated direction and avoid redundancy by clarifying the Council's responsibilities in relation to key entities, such as the LGBTQ Commission, Women's Commission, Governor's Committee on Disability Issues & Employment, Office of Equity, and Environmental Justice Council.
- Allow the Council to focus on health inequities (instead of only disparities) and social determinants of health which are the primary drivers of health and wellbeing, as well as expand our focus to include additional marginalized identities beyond racial/ethnic and gender identities.
- Support effective, enduring strategies and benefit more marginalized communities in addition to the groups currently specified in statute.
- Clarify our reporting requirements and the contents of those reports.

Focus on Health Equity and Wellbeing

With these statutory updates, the Council would provide policy coordination and leadership to help Washington respond to statewide health crises with strategies that are equal in scope and timeliness. Beyond survival and closing gaps, statutory updates can also allow the Council to help move our government toward systems that support optimal health and wellbeing for all Washingtonians.

Through research and the expertise of our community partners, we know that addressing unjust health disparities (i.e., health inequities) requires coordinated action to address root causes that are "diverse, complex, evolving, and interdependent in nature."[1] Root causes include but are not limited to classism, racism, anti-Indigeneity, sexism, geographic isolation, ableism, homophobia, transphobia, and discrimination based on immigration or documentation status. Crises such as the COVID-19 pandemic and climate change are further impacting the health and wellbeing of every person in our state and country, and exacerbating long-standing inequities in our healthcare, economic, workforce, educational, and additional systems. These crises demonstrate that we are interconnected with each other and with the natural environment, and that a resilient, thriving State of Washington requires dedicated, sustained efforts to eliminate unjust health disparities and advance health justice and equity.

Health inequities cost us all and have a large, avoidable financial toll on our state and country. According to studies, "Health inequities exist for racial and ethnic minorities and persons with lower educational attainment due to differential exposure to economic, social, structural, and environmental health risks and limited access to health care."[2] Nationally, health inequities lead to "delayed care, access barriers, missed diagnoses and limited access to preventive services and scientific advances" that result in roughly $42 billion in lost productivity each year.[3] According to the 2022 Black Well-Being Report, "Research shows that 30% of medical costs for Black, Hispanic, and Asian Americans are excess costs related to health inequities."[4] Additionally, the overall economic burden of health inequities on minoritized racial and ethnic populations has been estimated at $421-$451 billion and the economic burden on adults without a 4-year college degree has been estimated at $940-$978 billion. These costs come in the forms of "excess medical care expenditures, lost labor market productivity, and the value of excess premature death."[5]

Crises such as the COVID-19 pandemic and climate change are further impacting the health and wellbeing of Washingtonians, and exacerbating long-standing inequities in our health care, economic, workforce, educational, and additional systems. U.S. life expectancy was already on the decline before the pandemic: from 78.9 to 78.6 years between 2014 to 2017. Research shows that "[d]uring the last half of the 2010s, life expectancy for college-educated persons continued to increase, while life expectancy for adults without a college education decreased."[6] The pandemic's generational impacts include "profound effects on the Washington labor market"[7] and the most significant decline in life expectancy in the U.S. in the past century: "overall U.S. life expectancy declined by 2.7 years between 2019 and 2021, American Indian and Alaskan Native (AIAN) people experienced a decline of 6.6 years, Hispanic people and Black people dropped 4.2 and 4 years, respectively, compared to a decline of 2.4 years for White people and 2.1 years for Asian people.[8] When data are disaggregated, we see that Native Hawaiian and Pacific Islander people in Washington continue to experience much higher rates of COVID-19 contraction, hospitalization, and death compared to white people[9] due to deeply entrenched health inequities caused by structural racism and other forms of oppression.

These crises show how our state can only be as healthy as our marginalized and most vulnerable populations, including but not limited to immigrants, refugees, people with disabilities, women, people who identify as LGBTQIA2S+, veterans, people with limited English proficiency, rural communities, people experiencing poverty or economic exploitation, Indigenous communities, and communities of color. A University of Washington assessment conducted during the pandemic shows that "[f]armers, ranchers and growers in eastern Washington, and [Black, Indigenous, and people of color (BIPOC) farmers] and military veteran farmers, tended to experience a greater financial impact compared to other food producers in the state" while "[f]armers were already facing other challenges, from worker shortages to wildfires and heat waves related to climate change."[10]

2.Is this bill tied to the Governor's priority or priorities?

yes

3.If the response to the prior question was "Yes," please indicate which Governor's priority or priorities.

Updating the Council's authorizing statute would support a symbiotic relationship with all five goal areas of the Governor's Results Washington priorities because:

- Individual and community health are at the foundation of all personal and societal activities; and
- The Council would be able to consider health and wellbeing more holistically and center the social determinants of health in its policy development, which include the social, economic, environmental, and other factors that impact a person's and community's health.

Goal 1: World-class Education

- Educational opportunities are denied when families face health inequities, such as residential segregation, unemployment, substandard housing and school facilities, limited access to healthy foods, limited resources and services, limited transportation, concentrated pollution, and inadequate access to quality medical care.[1]
- Developing, graduating, and retaining a diverse workforce are essential to improving access to high-quality, culturally and linguistically appropriate care for underserved populations experiencing inequities.

Goal 2: Prosperous Economy

- Health inequities "are a drain on the economy," having a huge and avoidable cost on our state and country.[2] Inequities cause billions of dollars in lost productivity and lead to approximately $1.3 trillion in direct and indirect costs annually in the U.S.[3],[4],[5]
- The COVID-19 pandemic's severe negative impact on Washington's labor force and economy underscores the intrinsic connection between health equity and collective economic resilience.

Goal 3: Sustainable Energy & Clean Environment

- Exposure to environmental hazards, access to green spaces, air quality, and resilience against extreme heat are social determinants of health. As a community partner shared with us, "Who can [afford to] live in a home that has cooling in summer and heating in winter—it's not just an environmental issue, it's an equity and health issue."

Goal 4: Healthy & Safe Communities

- Council efforts would further focus on increasing access to quality and culturally and linguistically appropriate healthcare. As a community partner expressed, “Having access to healthcare would prevent so much illness.”
- Beyond healthcare, the Council’s efforts would be able to extend to additional social determinants of health. With these statutory updates, the Council could be more responsive to incorporating health and safety priorities identified by Washington’s communities.

Goal 5: Efficient, Effective, & Accountable Government

- With these statutory updates, the Council could further de-silo state agency efforts to make greater collective impact on addressing health disparities/inequities; help improve accountability to communities; and more comprehensively track policy adoption and implementation.

13.Equity Considerations: Please describe specifically how this proposal is likely to benefit or impact communities and populations who have historically been excluded and marginalized by governmental decisions.

Updating and clarifying our authorizing statute would allow the Council to more effectively support state government in addressing health inequities, thereby benefiting all Washingtonians.

In current statute, the Council is required to create a state action plan and policy to eliminate health disparities by race/ethnicity and gender. The requested changes would allow the Council to have a greater impact on leading the state to eliminate health inequities and promote holistic health and wellbeing. The changes would allow the Council to work on health inequities (instead of disparities), focus on the social determinants of health which are the primary drivers of health and health equity, and expand our focus to additional marginalized identities beyond racial/ethnic and gender identities. This expansion would benefit more groups than our current statute allows.

Community partners have consistently encouraged the Council to address upstream structural inequities in our systems (e.g., racism, sexism, ableism, discrimination) that cause poor health outcomes downstream. The requested statutory updates would allow the Council to create policy recommendations to address inequities that disproportionately impact Indigenous communities, people of color, women, transgender people, non-binary people, people experiencing poverty, rural communities, people with limited English proficiency, veterans, refugees and immigrants, people with disabilities, youth, LGBTQIA2S+ communities, and additional marginalized Washingtonians who experience unfair, unjust, and avoidable health disparities.

In alignment with Executive Order 22-04 [Implementing the Washington State Pro-Equity Anti-Racism (PEAR) Plan & Playbook], this proposal furthers equity in governmental systems and laws, health and human services, and state and local practices.

14. Equity Considerations: Describe how your agency engaged with communities and populations, particularly those who have been historically excluded and marginalized by governmental decisions.

The Council conducted a redesign project to review and recommend updates to our authorizing statute, which was open for public participation. Early on, we asked participants about limitations to the Council's work. Some responses included: lack of funding for community engagement; limited staffing and time; lack of geographical and cross-state representation; and lack of visibility and understanding of the Council's work among decision makers.

In addition to hosting redesign workshops open to the public, we did focused community partner engagement in Summer 2023 to learn how the Council could better align with partners' visions and priorities and better engage with partners and the communities they serve (see attached report). We prioritized organizations working with communities who often experience systemic racism, social and economic exclusion, discrimination, exploitation, and other forms of oppression. These organizations support or organize Black and Brown, rural, LGBTQIA2S+, immigrant, refugee, and economically marginalized communities.

15. Equity Considerations: What input did your agency receive and how was it incorporated into your proposal?

Overall, input from community partners was incorporated in both this request legislation as well as our decision package put forth last session. Partners emphasized the importance of the Council centering community voice and community-led processes; having staffing and other resources to create long-term, reciprocal relationships; implementing equitable processes and inclusive convenings; sharing relevant and timely information through culturally and linguistically appropriate channels; coordinating with other governmental groups working toward the various dimensions of equity and justice; and creating meaningful impact on governmental systems.

16.Equity Considerations: Explain why and how these equity impacts will be addressed; i.e., consider communities or populations excluded or disproportionately impacted by the proposal.

At this time, we do not expect anyone has been excluded or will be further marginalized by this proposal. The proposed updates recognize marginalized identities shift over time, so the language (e.g., “and other marginalized communities”) are intended to accommodate these shifts. However, if inequities arise, the Council will work with Tribes, community partners, and state agencies to address them.

Sec. 2. RCW 43.20.270 and 2006 c 239 s 1 are each amended to read as follows:

The legislature finds that women and people of color experience significant disparities from men and the general population in education, employment, healthful living conditions, access to health care, and other social determinants of health. The legislature finds that these circumstances coupled with lower, slower, and less culturally appropriate and gender appropriate access to needed medical care result in higher rates of morbidity and mortality for women and persons of color than observed in the general population. Health disparities are defined by the national ((~~institute[s]~~)) institutes of health as the differences in incidence, prevalence, mortality, and burden of disease and other adverse health conditions that exist among specific population groups in the United States.

(1) The council shall ((~~consider in its deliberations and by 2012, create an action plan for eliminating health disparities. The action plan must address, but is not limited to, the following diseases, conditions, and health indicators: Diabetes, asthma, infant mortality, HIV/AIDS, heart disease, strokes, breast cancer, cervical cancer, prostate cancer, chronic kidney disease, sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS), mental health, women's health issues, smoking cessation, oral disease, and immunization rates of children and senior citizens. The council shall prioritize the diseases, conditions, and health indicators according to prevalence and severity of the health disparity. The council shall address these priorities on an incremental basis by adding no more than five of the diseases, conditions, and health indicators to each update or revised version of the action plan. The action plan shall be updated biannually. The council shall meet as often as necessary but not less than two times per calendar year. The reports must detail the work of the commission, the opportunities identified to advance the goals under subsection (7) of this section, which, if any, of the opportunities a state agency is implementing, which, if any, opportunities should be pursued with legislative policy or fiscal authority, and which opportunities have been identified as beneficial, but lack federal authority to implement.

(9) Subject to sufficient existing agency authority, state agencies may implement specific elements of any report issued under this section. Sec. 6. RCW 70.41.470 and 2021 c 162 s 5 are each amended to read as follows:

(1) As of January 1, 2013, each hospital that is recognized by the internal revenue service as a 501(c)(3) nonprofit entity must make its federally required community health needs assessment widely available to the public and submit it to the department within fifteen days of submission to the internal revenue service. Following completion of the initial community health needs assessment, each hospital in accordance with the internal revenue service shall complete and make widely available to the public and submit to the department an assessment once every three years. The department must post the information submitted to it pursuant to this subsection on its website.

(2)(a) Unless contained in the community health needs assessment under subsection (1) of this section, a hospital subject to the requirements under subsection (1) of this section shall make public and submit to the department a description of the community served by the hospital, including both a geographic description and a description of the general population served by the hospital; and demographic information such as leading causes of death, levels of chronic illness, and descriptions of the medically underserved, low-income, and minority, or chronically ill populations in the community.

(b)(i) Beginning July 1, 2022, a hospital, other than a hospital designated by medicare as a critical access hospital or sole community hospital, that is subject to the requirements under subsection (1) of this section must annually submit to the department an addendum which details information about activities identified as community health improvement services with a cost of $5,000 or more. The addendum must include the type of activity, the method in which the activity was delivered, how the activity relates to an identified community need in the community health needs assessment, the target population for the activity, strategies to reach the target population, identified outcome metrics, the cost to the hospital to provide the activity, the methodology used to calculate the hospital's costs, and the number of people served by the activity. If a community health improvement service is administered by an entity other than the hospital, the other entity must be identified in the addendum.

(ii) Beginning July 1, 2022, a hospital designated by medicare as a critical access hospital or sole community hospital that is subject to the requirements under subsection (1) of this section must annually submit to the department an addendum which details information about the 10 highest cost activities identified as community health improvement services. The addendum must include the type of activity, the method in which the activity was delivered, how the activity relates to an identified community need in the community health needs assessment, the target population for the activity, strategies to reach the target population, identified outcome metrics, the cost to the hospital to provide the activity, the methodology used to calculate the hospital's costs, and the number of people served by the activity. If a community health improvement service is administered by an entity other than the hospital, the other entity must be identified in the addendum.

(iii) The department shall require the reporting of demographic information about participant race, ethnicity, any disability, gender identity, preferred language, and zip code of primary residency. The department, in consultation with interested entities, may revise the required demographic information according to an established six-year review cycle about participant race, ethnicity, disabilities, gender identity, preferred language, and zip code of primary residence that must be reported under (b)(i) and (ii) of this subsection (2). At a minimum, the department's consultation process shall include community organizations that provide community health improvement services, communities impacted by health inequities, health care workers, hospitals, and the governor's ((~~interagency coordinating~~)) council ((~~on~~)) for health ((~~disparities~~)) justice and equity. The department shall establish a six-year cycle for the review of the information requested under this subsection (2)(b)(iii).

(iv) The department shall provide guidance on participant data collection and the reporting requirements under this subsection (2)(b). The guidance shall include a standard form for the reporting of information under this subsection (2)(b). The standard form must allow for the reporting of community health improvement services that are repeated within a reporting period to be combined within the addendum as a single project with the number of instances of the services listed. The department must develop the guidelines in consultation with interested entities, including an association representing hospitals in Washington, labor unions representing workers who work in hospital settings, and community health board associations. The department must post the information submitted to it pursuant to this subsection (2)(b) on its website.

(3)(a) Each hospital subject to the requirements of subsection (1) of this section shall make widely available to the public a community benefit implementation strategy within one year of completing its community health needs assessment. In developing the implementation strategy, hospitals shall consult with community-based organizations and stakeholders, and local public health jurisdictions, as well as any additional consultations the hospital decides to undertake. Unless contained in the implementation strategy under this subsection (3)(a), the hospital must provide a brief explanation for not accepting recommendations for community benefit proposals identified in the assessment through the stakeholder consultation process, such as excessive expense to implement or infeasibility of implementation of the proposal.

(b) Implementation strategies must be evidence-based, when available; or development and implementation of innovative programs and practices should be supported by evaluation measures.

(4) When requesting demographic information under subsection (2)(b) of this section, a hospital must inform participants that providing the information is voluntary. If a hospital fails to report demographic information under subsection (2)(b) of this section because a participant refused to provide the information, the department may not take any action against the hospital for failure to comply with reporting requirements or other licensing standards on that basis.

(5) For the purposes of this section, the term "widely available to the public" has the same meaning as in the internal revenue service guidelines.

NEW SECTION. Sec. 7. RCW 44.28.810 (Review of governor's interagency coordinating council on health disparities—Report to the legislature) and 2006 c 239 s 7 are each repealed.
